Why buyers choose Kinnow

Kinnow is a mandarin hybrid of the King and Willowleaf varieties. In Pakistan it is grown across the Punjab citrus belt, centred on Sargodha, which produces close to half of the country's citrus and most of its citrus exports.

- Loose, easy-to-peel rind, ideal for snacking
- High juice content with a sweet, tangy flavour
- Deep orange colour that stands out on the shelf
- Packed in Trillium or the buyer's own branded packing
- Shipped in temperature-controlled reefer containers

HEALTH BENEFITS

Goodness in every segment

Kinnow is a naturally sweet, juicy fruit that is high in vitamin C and virtually fat-free. It is enjoyed fresh, as juice and in desserts, and fits easily into a healthy, balanced diet.

Blood oranges add anthocyanins, the natural red pigments also found in berries and red grapes.

TYPICAL NUTRITION PER 100 G

53 kcal	27 mg	1.8 g	166 mg	85 %
ENERGY	VITAMIN C	DIETARY FIBRE	POTASSIUM	WATER

Immune support

100 g gives about a third of the daily vitamin C reference intake. Vitamin C contributes to the normal function of the immune system.

Natural energy

Vitamin C contributes to the reduction of tiredness and fatigue, and increases iron absorption from food.

Healthy skin

Vitamin C contributes to normal collagen formation for the normal function of the skin.

Natural antioxidants

Vitamin C helps protect cells from oxidative stress. Kinnow also contains citrus flavonoids such as hesperidin.

Natural fibre

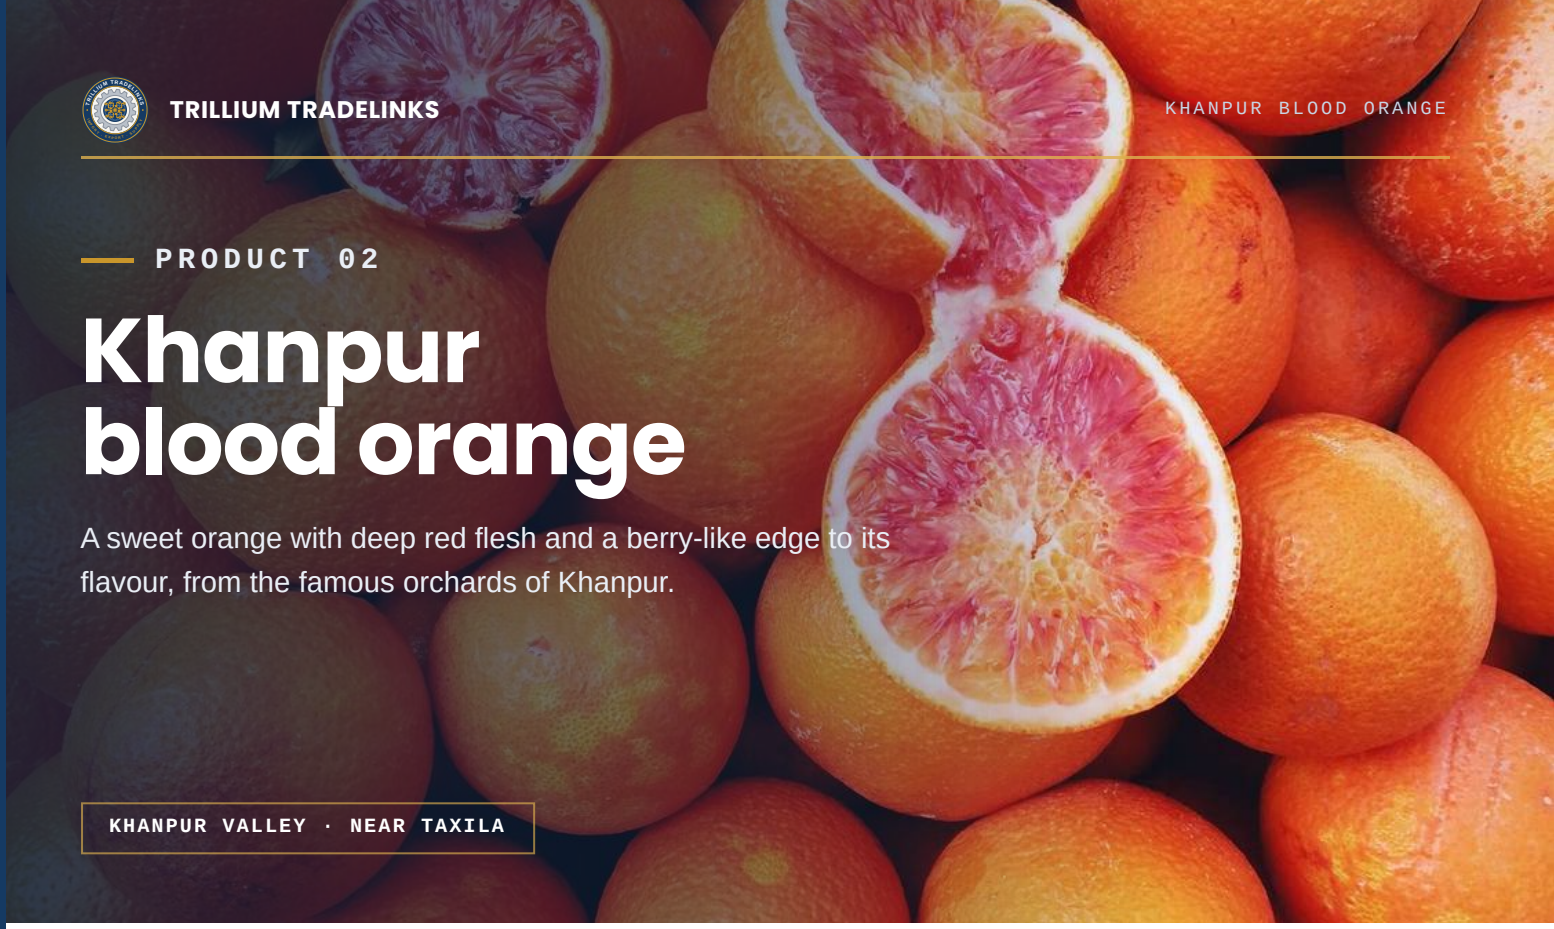

Eating whole segments keeps the dietary fibre that strained juice leaves behind.

Light and refreshing

About 85% water, virtually fat-free and naturally low in sodium. A juicy, low-calorie snack.

Typical values for fresh mandarins (USDA FoodData Central); values vary with variety, season and ripeness. Daily reference intake for vitamin C: 80 mg (EU). Kinnow is a food, not a medicine.

A speciality from our doorstep

The Khanpur valley, a short drive from our Rawalpindi office, is known across Pakistan for its red blood oranges. Volumes are small each season, which makes them a premium choice for speciality retailers, juice bars, hotels and restaurants.

- Striking red colour for fresh cuts, salads and juice
- Sweeter than most common oranges
- Hand-picked and graded by size
- Can travel in the same container as Kinnow
- Other valley oranges on request: Hamlin, Washington Navel, Mosambi
